What's new

IPAM begins search for new director

Terence Tao · 27 January 2016

https://terrytao.wordpress.com/2016/01/27/ipam-begins-search-for-new-director/

tao2typ · converted to Typst 2026-10-14 (UTC)

The Institute for Pure and Applied Mathematics (IPAM) here at UCLA is seeking applications for its new director in 2017 or 2018, to replace Russ Caflisch, who is nearing the end of his five-year term as IPAM director. The previous directors of IPAM (Tony Chan, Mark Green, and Russ Caflisch) were also from the mathematics department here at UCLA, but the position is open to all qualified applicants with extensive scientific and administrative experience in mathematics, computer science, or statistics. Applications will be reviewed on June 1, 2016 (though the applications process will remain open through to Dec 1, 2016).

Comments (2)

nipuna_upeksha · 27 January 2016

Good luck finding a good director..

B. · 27 January 2016

Are you applying?